CIRCULATION AFFIDAVIT
Rockland, Me., Oct. 11, 1928.
I, the undersigned, Frank S. Lytle, who on oath declares that he is President of the office of The Courier-Gazette, and that of the issue of this paper of Oct. 9, 1928, there was printed a total of 6240 copies.
Before me, FRANK R. MILLER, Notary Public.

FIRE PREVENTION
Among the various weeks in the year set apart for nationwide observance there is none worthier of attention than the present one. Fire Prevention Week has each year grown in importance as the thing it stands for has increasingly enforced itself upon public consideration. The toll that fire takes of property each year, running into hundreds of millions of dollars, constitutes a tremendous drain upon our country's wealth and deserves to be drastically dealt with. In our own community the problems of fire prevention have not gone without consideration. Few cities of its size are better equipped with fire fighting apparatus and water service than Rockland. Yet with us as elsewhere eternal vigilance is needed as a watch-word and the importance of eliminating every possible hazard kept actively in mind. Clean premises in factory, store and home should be the rule. We incline to forget the constant menace of cellar rubbish, the accumulation of old boxes, paper and such. What about that cellar at your business place or in your home? Will it bear inspection?

The American people are determined to give prohibition a fair trial, according to Bishop William T. Manning of New York and in the light of the trial, he says, there will be few who wish to see the Eighteenth amendment repealed. Bishop Manning's view of the matter is not only important but significant, as he did not vote for prohibition, and for some time doubted the advisability of the law. He is now convinced that prohibition is "bringing much benefit to our people as a whole." Holding it right to speak upon this subject at this time because it is a great moral issue affecting the lives and homes of our people, Bishop Manning said:

Some great and serious evils have resulted from this law, but these evils are often exaggerated by those who oppose the law, and most of these evils are due not to the law itself but to failure to observe and enforce it. What is now needed is not abandonment of the undertaking, but more thorough and impartial investigation of the facts relating to it. The assertions that this law cannot be enforced come, most of them, from those who do not wish the law to be enforced, and who have never wanted it enforced, and who admit they hope to see it repealed on the ground that it cannot be enforced. My belief is, that before very long the attitude of violent opposition to this law will be regarded as an old man's view and that youth will take its natural place on the side of idealism and progress and of that which is for the greatest good of the greatest number.

In Philip Hale's column, "as the World Wars," which supplies a daily feature of entertainment to the editorial page of the Boston Herald, one encounters now and then matters which if not weighty at least evoke consideration. Lately contributors to the column have had under discussion the Barlow Knife, a piece of cutlery familiar to earlier generations and brought to this country, one writer says, from Sheffield, England, its place of origin. The knife is said still to have some sale here. We do not recall that the Barlow had any particular popularity in this down-east region, even if it was known at all. The knife of our boyhood that held chief place in the affections was the Jonathan Crooke, a handsome piece of workmanship, its polished black handle of a fashion that accommodated itself to the hand and a symmetry and keenness of blade which lent to it a special distinction. Upon each of the blades was stamped the design of a pistol and heart, a trade-mark whose significance we never understood, but to hear its juvenile owner boastfully proclaim that his was a "Jonathan Crooke, pistol and heart," was to throw an immediate scare into the heart of the boy to whom a challenge to "cut knives" had been issued. Jonathan Crooke, pistol and heart. Does the knife continue today in vogue? And do boys today "cut knives"? We wonder.

Seventeen members of the local Methodist church went to Bangor Monday to hear Dr. E. Stanley Jones, returned Missionary from India, and author of "The Christ of the Indian Road" and "Christ at the Round Table" which took an extraordinary rank among the best sellers of the religious world in the past three years. Dr. Jones is making a tour of every area of the Methodist church at the request of the board of Bishops, holding mass meetings to present the modern evangelistic message of Jesus Christ. It was found necessary to transfer the Bangor meeting to City Hall to accommodate all who wished to hear this speaker, who is one of the most remarkable figures out of the missionary world for a decade.

The only football attraction in this city Saturday will be Winslow High vs Rockland High at Community Park. The local boys have chipped up a lot since visiting that 25 to 9 defeat upon Crosby High of Belfast, and in spite of the possible loss of Kenneth Wiggin, are going to make the Winslow boys move faster than the last syllable of their name indicates. Camden High will be playing Crosby High in Belfast, which game ought to furnish a nice little line of comparison between Rockland and Camden.

MAILING BALLOTS

State Getting Ready For Second Election—Three Parties On Ticket.

Four hundred and ninety-four thousand, two hundred regular ballots and 10,475 alternate voting ballots, will be printed for the national election which will be held Tuesday, Nov. 6. The candidates for Presidential electors are as follows:
Republican—William L. Bonney of Brunswick, Charles A. Gilman of Lewiston, Allen C. T. Wilson of Presque Isle, Claire S. Carter of Auburn and Joseph D. Phillips of Southwest Harbor.
Democratic—Samuel L. Bates of Portland, Obadiah Gardner of Rockland, Charles H. Norton of Dover-Foxcroft, Thomas V. Doherty of Houlton, Edward Chase of Baring and Mabelle P. Chaney of Lisbon.
Socialist—Melville A. Floyd of South Waterford, A. Lincoln Young of Lincolnville, Hazen S. Taylor of Auburn, Percival J. Parris of Paris, Henry J. Gasmon of Rumford and Wendall F. Farrington of Livermore.
The candidates of the Socialist party for Presidential electors filed their petitions of 1,000 names just in time to get on the ballot and the names of the candidates for president and vice president of that party, Norman Thomas of New York and James H. Maurer of Pennsylvania do not have a place on the ballot, as they did not reach the Department of State until Sept. 22, after the work of printing the ballots had begun.
Among the Presidential electors chosen four years ago was Mrs. Mary Perry Rich of Rockport, the first woman ever elected to that office in this State.

THE WORLD SERIES

Tuesday's game in St. Louis was the fourth and last of the World Series for this year. The Cardinals held a 2 to 1 lead until the seventh inning when Sherdel was driven from the box and Alexander fared little better. Babe Ruth was the star performer making three successive home runs, one of which was followed by Gehrig's homer. It was Hoyt's second win in the short series. The score by innings:
New York 0 0 0 1 0 0 4 2 0—7
Base hits, New York 15, St. Louis 11. Errors, New York 2, Home runs, Duro, Ruth 3, Gehrig 1. Bases on balls, off Sherdel 3, off Hoyt 3. Struck out, by Sherdel 1, by Alexander 1, by Hoyt 8.

The financial statistics for the series were:
Paid attendance, 199,975; receipts (without tax), $777,299; advisory council, $77,729; players' share, $119,726; St. Louis' club, $69,956; New York club, $69,956; National league, $69,956; American league, $69,956.

CLARK ISLAND

John Caven had a party in his new house last Saturday night. Ice cream and cake were served.
Barge 700 is loading paving from John Meehan & Sons for New York. Dorothy, little daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Leroy Jackson, was operated on for appendicitis at Knox Hospital. She is quite comfortable.

"So Mabel kept a diary throughout her vacation." "She calls it that, but there's so much in it about the nice boys she met, I call it a Him Book."

"ON MY SET"

Static has spoiled the pleasure of my reception in several of the recent nights but I readily forgive the eccentricities of the atmosphere when I think what ideal service the radio gave during the four games of the World Series. It was coming in good from all of the stations, but I got my best satisfaction from WOSH, the Congress Square station of Portland. Graham McNamee was in fine form, but did not inject the usual excitement into the series for the reason that there was not so much to get excited about.

"Great Moments in History," presenting the story of America's founding and growth in the form of radio drama, returns to the air for its third season in a series of broadcasts which will be begun through the NBC System, Friday evening at 7 o'clock. Among the stations carrying this interesting service are WJZ, WBZ, and KDKA.

The big football games are being broadcast each Saturday afternoon until the close of the season.

Don't neglect to have your set in readiness for the night of Nov. 6. There's a reason.

The frequency of static crashes last night spoiled what would otherwise have been very fine reception, for there was an abundance of power and the quality was also good. I persevered to the extent of logging these stations: WKGW, WFFF, KDKA, WLS, WGY, WNAC, WEA, WEEL, WBZ, WHT, WPG, WEAN, KYW, WJZ, WMAQ, WJR, WTAM, CKGW.

The joy of life lies as much in its slanders and defeats as in its achievements.—Thomas Burke.

"Contentment and happiness of labor depend as much on conditions OUTSIDE the factory as inside"

"The security of capital depends on the contentment of labor. The contentment and happiness of labor depend as much on conditions outside the factory as inside. Labor gains in respect, contentment and interest as it moves away from population congestion. Industry, for its own good, goes to small towns."

Thus a prominent industrial executive comments on his company's policy of placing its factories in the smaller centers of population.

The trend toward decentralization of labor is based on sound business principles, directed toward lower costs and better production. In this day of widespread distribution of electric power and efficient transportation facilities, industry may realize the distinct advantages of small town factory locations.

Under improved and more economical living conditions, employees are responsible, conservative, permanent. Their wages represent a greater real income than in the larger cities. In a less hurried atmosphere valuable human energy is conserved for productive use. More space is available for industrial operations and there is plenty of room for expansion.

Information on small town factory sites, from the specific standpoint of your particular business, will be supplied by INDUSTRIAL DEVELOPMENT DEPARTMENT, CENTRAL MAINE POWER COMPANY, AUGUSTA, MAINE. Correspondence is invited.

is well known for its conservative, permanent labor. Strikes are almost unknown. Labor, both skilled and unskilled is plentiful. Power is cheap and the supply plentiful. Your libellant further avers that she has resided in this State and in the City of Rockland in good faith for more than one year next prior to the commencement of these proceedings, and there is no collusion between said parties to obtain a divorce.

A CLEAR COMPLEXION

Ruddy cheeks—sparkling eyes—most women can have. Dr. F. M. Edwards for 20 years treated scores of women for liver and bowel ailments. During these years he gave his patients a substitute for calomel made of a few well-known vegetable ingredients mixed with olive oil, naming them Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets. Know them by their olive color.

These tablets are wonder-workers on the liver and bowels, which cause a normal action, carrying off the waste and poisonous matter in one's system.

If you have a pale face, sallow look, dull eyes, pimples, coated tongue, headaches, a listless, no-good feeling, all out of sorts, inactive bowels, you take one of Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets nightly for a time and note the pleasing results. Thousands of women and men take Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets—now and then to keep fit. 15c, 30c and 60c.

Announcement

There are certain ideals and services in conducting a drug business which mean a great deal to patrons, but which are frequently ignored or lost sight of by the druggist. For instance, the highest attainment of the real drug store is the preparation of medicines on prescriptions of physicians. Nothing is more important than that with us.

Nor is it within the province of the drug store with ideals to push the sale of proprietary preparations of various kinds which encourage self diagnosis and self medication on the part of the user. Whenever you are ill enough to need medicine you are ill enough to need the advice of your doctor.

In these columns we shall point out from week to week why this is true—and why you should have your prescriptions filled by a drug store such as ours which specializes in this important work.

Littlefield Memorial Church Will Celebrate Loyalty Week "With Change of Program" Each Day

Loyalty Week, Oct. 14 to 21 inclusive is the grand opening of the season's program at the Littlefield Memorial Free Baptist church. All the departments and auxiliary organizations are actively prepared to make the week a great success. The program features things new and old and is sure to attract the attention of all who are at all interested in the church.

Family Day will be featured Sunday morning when families will attend church and sit together. Grandfathers and grandmothers will be especially welcomed at the head of their respective family groups. It is hoped if possible to have some five generation groups present. The pastor will have a message especially suited for the service, and the choir will render music fitting the occasion. For Sunday evening of the 14th a special song-o-logue service has been prepared, entitled, "Follow Me." From the very inception of this service the message by new and unique means will be brought to a fitting climax.

Monday evening, under the direction of Miss Eva Ames, the church is to give a reception to the new comers to the community. A fine program has been planned and refreshments will be served. Tuesday evening there will be the first of the year's loyalty prayer meetings, when it is expected to have at least 100 in attendance, and a prayer meeting that will be eclipsed only by each succeeding one of the year.

The young people will make the evening of Wednesday attractive with their loyalty rally and a singing address by Rev. J. Charles MacDonal, pastor of the First Baptist church. Thursday evening will be given over to a conference of the several departments of the church for the planning of the social program for the fall and winter.

The annual roll-call of the church will be held Friday evening with supper at 6 o'clock in the vestry. The roll-call service will afford all the members of this loyal little church an opportunity to register their interest in the repair program now in progress. It is probable that the sac-

HEAVY SENTENCES

Rockland Man Figures In One In District Court At Portland.

Fines totalling $5,750 and a term of 18 months in the Atlanta penitentiary, one of the heaviest sentences ever given in a liquor case in the U. S. District Court in Portland, were imposed Tuesday on Joseph Duble of Portland.

Duble was adjudged guilty by a jury last September of charges of conspiracy, sales and transportation of liquor. He appealed to the U. S. Court of Appeals which sustained the verdict of the lower court.

A fine of $1,000 was paid by Alden G. Merrill of Rockland when he pleaded guilty to an indictment, charging sales of liquor.

He was arrested almost a month ago after Federal agents had worked in Rockland and in Boothbay Harbor in an effort to suppress the liquor traffic which had reached rather extensive proportions. An indictment was returned by the grand jury of the September term of court.

"I'll have to charge you $50 for improving your hearing," said the doctor.

"What?" inquired the patron.

"I say your bill will be $50."

"Can't hear you, sir."

"Then I won't charge you a cent."

"Thank you doctor,"—Chicago Tribune.

THE DIGEST'S POLL

Shows Hoover Still Far In the Lead, With Lines Tightening.

Growing indications of a close election are shown in the Literary Digest straw Presidential poll, although on the returns released Friday night, Hoover still leads Smith by a substantial margin. At present Hoover has 68 percent and Smith slightly less and 31 percent of the votes.

Of the 752,810 ballots tabulated Hoover has 514,397 while Smith polls 231,061 and the three minor candidates split the remainder of 6,352 votes.

Hoover is leading in all of the 20 States that are represented in this third week's figures of the national "postcard election" with the exception of Arkansas, which shows a plurality for Smith. None of the other Southern States is included yet in the returns except Maryland, and this State shows Hoover ahead by a small lead.

An analysis of "how the same voters voted in 1924" evidences that of the 482,233 who signify that they voted the Republican ticket four years ago 75 per cent are now voting for Hoover while nearly 21 per cent have switched their party allegiance and are voting for Smith.

Over 60 per cent of the 140,830 voters in this straw poll who state that they supported the Democratic candidate in the last national election are now voting Smith and almost 40 per cent of the same group signify that they are leaving the Democratic fold this year and are voting for Hoover.

Smith gains over 50,000 votes numerically to date by this shifting of party bolters but The Literary Digest cautions that too few States have been heard from to make accurate deductions yet.

In Smith's native State of New York, Hoover has 83,472 votes while the Democratic nominee has only 23,245. These returns are from the 30 State districts. It is stated, however, and no returns have been reported from New York City where the entire registered vote is being polled.

"The flippers" year of jubilee, states The Literary Digest editorially, "already hailed by numerous Democratic and Republican editors throughout the country, seems to be strikingly signalized by The Literary Digest's Presidential poll, as the returns pass beyond three-quarters of a million. Mugwumps, bolters and conscientious objectors swarm over the political fences on all sides.

"In the present tabulation of 752,810 votes, a new record for votes received at this stage of any Digest poll, more of Mr. Smith's support comes from voters who supported the Republican ticket in 1924 than from Democrats of that year.

On the other hand, 54,789 Democrats of the last Presidential election are now for Hoover. Since there are shown to be 109,419 bolters in Governor Smith's column, the Democratic Party benefits by the exchange.

"Arkansas, the first Southern State to be represented, goes to Smith by a small margin.

"Maryland and Wisconsin alone, thus far, show the Democratic nominee within striking distance of his Republican opponent.

"Finally, the strong drift of Republican voters to Governor Smith continues at much the same rate shown in the past tabulations of the poll."

Why change from certainty to uncertainty? As the days pass between now and election day, November 6, the American people are going to come to recognize more and more that the fundamental issue in this campaign, an issue which stands out above all others, is contained in that one word—prosperity.—Fargo Forum.

POLLING THE WOMEN

Straw Ballot Shows Hoover Ahead and Reasons Are Given.

Supplementing a poll of all voters in the recently issued "Who's Who in America," reported for both men and women two weeks ago by the Republican National Committee, a tabulation of the women voters alone was reported by the Women's National Committee for Hoover, of which Mrs. F. Louis Slade is chairman.

Among 995 replies from women listed in "Who's Who," 565 were reported for Hoover and 340 for Smith.

The previous tabulation for both men and women showed 5,510 for Hoover and 1,264 for Smith. The per cent of both men and women who were for Hoover was 88; whereas the per cent of women alone for Hoover was 82.

In addition to asking the voters' preference the poll asked the reasons for it, and the replies received from the women showed they were influenced by the same considerations as the men, namely, a belief that Mr. Hoover was best qualified by experience and accomplishment in handling domestic and foreign affairs.

Among widely known women who gave their reasons, Katherine M. Blackford, character analyst, said: "Mr. Hoover is intelligent, cultured, trained and experienced. He is a man of courage, sound principle and clean morals. He is cosmopolitan and he has unusual talent and ability for his high office."

Others whose replies were similar to this were Nina Wilcox Putnam, short story writer; Katherine Bennett Davis, sociologist, and Dr. Eileen F. Pendleton, president of Wellesley College.

Next after experience, in frequency of reasons as given by these women for supporting Mr. Hoover, was his stand on prohibition. Then followed his freedom for control by any political machine and a vigorously expressed conviction that Republican victory spells continued prosperity.

POLITICAL GOSSIP

Although he voted the Democratic ticket in the last four Presidential elections, Dr. Harry A. Garfield of Williams College announces he will cast his ballot for Herbert Hoover. "Prohibition, farm relief and foreign relations are the three main issues of the campaign," said Dr. Garfield. "I favor Mr. Hoover's stand on each of the three, particularly on the prohibition question."

Based on a statistical analysis of "The Literary Digest" poll, William H. Hill, chairman of the New York Hoover-Curtis campaign committee, predicted that Hoover will carry the state by 280,000 votes coming to the Bronx with a plurality of over 600,000. The Hill analysis gives Mr. Smith a plurality of only 324,000 in New York City.

"The method used in this computation is purely scientific," said Mr. Hill. "On the basis of 'The Literary Digest' returns, as announced our statistician has simply shown how the 1924 voters will probably divide in the coming election, and how the new votes will divide by parties."

Mrs. Charles Dana Gibson, wife of the artist, and one of the campaign speakers of the Democratic National Committee, will accompany Gov. Smith on his second campaign trip. Mrs. Gibson, who is a candidate for elector-at-large of New York and who was a delegate to the Houston convention, will take part in all the functions given in honor of the women of the party and probably will do the speech-making, since neither the Governor's wife nor daughter make any pretense at oratory.

The second section of the Democratic campaign textbook, if its content has been accurately summarized in the press, attempts, among other things, to saddle the Republican Party with blame for the enormous reductions which have taken place in the public debt. This is much like censuring a mother for looking after the best interests of her child.

Hoover is interested in the welfare of his brother-men. Hoover is deeply interested in the welfare of women and is sympathetic with them. Hoover is still more concerned about the children of this nation.—Daily Oklahoman.

A rising tide of revolt against domination by Tammany Hall, which has assumed the leadership of the Democratic party in this campaign, is overshadowing even the farm relief question in the West. Democrats who have loyally supported the ticket for years, confronted for the first time with the Tammany issue, are refusing to be whipped into line and are finding more and more to admire in Hoover and Curtis, according to those in touch with the situation.—Camden (N. J.) Argus.

Governor Smith's assurances that if elected he will give the farmers and their problems his earnest thought and attention, reminds one of the old lady who said that her boy, John, was a most ingenious youth. "Why," said she, "that boy could build a house if he only had the tools and knew how!"—St. James (Minn.) Independent.

If Governor Smith can be howled over by an old wives' tale he is not the stuff of which Presidents are made.—New York Herald-Tribune.

No one will be surprised that Governor Smith has been received with "wild enthusiasm" upon his visit to Omaha, where he made his first important speech as a presidential candidate recently. No one in his position ever was received everywhere with greater enthusiasm and larger crowds than William J. Bryan, but when the election returns came in it was found invariably that Bryan had drawn the crowds and the cheers and the Republican candidate had got the votes.—Boston Transcript.

"Giants in the Earth" is among the most talked-of books. Translated from the Norwegian, Ole Edvard Rolvaag has presented a heroic tale of Norwegian settlers in the plains of South Dakota. Although there is no woven plot, the story mounts steadily in interest and every incident is perfectly chosen to reveal the psychological drama. One catches from the harvest incidents an almost ecstatic joy of earth, love and mastery; from the winter scenes, gloom and monotony. It presents to the reader a story done in heroic proportions of a man's struggle with the earth, and is also a true picture of a great chapter in American history. It is conceded to be the fullest, finest and most powerful novel that has been written about pioneer life in America.

Another novel that is being widely read is Hugh Walpole's "Wintersmoon." In style it reminds one vividly of his previous novel "The Duchess of Wrex." It is a story of post-war London society, of two sisters who symbolize two ways of life, and is written in a suave, well-mannered style, packed with minute observation, tempered by humane understanding of the troubles that afflict these lordly folks, the English aristocrats, who always hold a glamour for "us Americans."

In Andre Maurois' "Disraeli," one feels that the French biographer has found the perfect subject for his skill. For Disraeli lives in the pages, a strange composite—poet, magician, opportunist, loyal British statesman. It is eloquently written.

Edward Bok's latest book "Perhaps I Am" is finding a popular following which it most assuredly deserves. It consists of pages from the experiences abroad and at home of a business man who retired while there was still time to loaf and invite his soul, and who persuaded Mr. Bok to rewrite for him the book of anecdotes and philosophies, gathered during the first year of his leisure. It is an easy mixture of sense and sentiment, of anecdotes and platitudes. There is even a chapter filled with examples of the limerick, evidently one of the things which the author is finding time to enjoy. We know now what the lurking twinkles in Mr. Bok's eyes mean!

Admirers of "The Christ of the Indian Road" will welcome the latest book of Eli Stanley Jones, "Christ at the Round Table," "conferences" which are attempts to set forth the dominant aspects of religious life and thought as they appear to men of the most varied types. Special care has been taken to present it as it appears to Orientals. With a wide knowledge of Indian religious life and the fervor of a Christian missionary, Mr. Jones makes a stirring appeal to his fellow Christians to offer to others the redemptive power which comes to those who live in the faith of the Gospel. It has something of the charm which conspicuously marked "The Christ of the Indian Road," and is a direct appeal to people of all faiths.

For those who think there is never anything thrilling to read in non-fiction "Count Luckner the Sea Devil" is recommended. It is a story of the European war, concerning naval operations in the German navy, and tells of the striking exploits of Count Luckner, the German naval officer who "sank 14 allied ships without the loss of a single life." Mr. Thomas calls Count Luckner the naval counterpart of Col. T. E. Lawrence. The tale of this romantic adventurer is supposed to be told by Count Luckner himself, with an introductory chapter by Mr. Thomas, and is profusely illustrated. For a biographical tale it is as exciting as the best sea romances. The narrative is punctuated with bits of sentimentality, but the humor and direct conversational style hold attention. A fine boys' book. As thrilling as any old tale of privateering days, it brings back the ancient romance of the sea.

Commander Byrd's book "Skyward" is being eagerly read, even though many are "fed up" on aviation. It is a story of his flying career since training days at Pensacola, reaching its natural climax in the polar and trans-Atlantic flights. It is generously illustrated with photographs, and contains a good deal of aviation history during the period of Byrd's interest in flying. The critics concede that it is a valuable book of the times.

Can you imagine an English speaking continent with a literature populated of more than six million people almost entirely without a native literary life? Such, however, is the unique situation of Australia today, C. Hartley Grattan declares in "The Bookman."

"Australia suffers from a literary inferiority complex. Her readers feel safer with a third-rate English or American book than with a first-rate Australian one. They cannot believe that men they see and know can write good books. The whole tone of society is hostile to literature."

In all its history the island continent has never produced a writer of any notable literary worth, or even retained as a permanent resident any of the many notable ones who have visited there in hope of finding a virgin field for further literary effort. This latter group includes Charles Darwin, Joseph Conrad, Galsworthy, Leonard Merrick, Havelock Ellis, D. H. Lawrence and Jack London.

The Longfellow house at Pittsfield, Mass., where the poet found inspiration to write "The Old Clock on the Stairs" is soon to pass away, as its storied inhabitants long since have done. Civic progress has decreed that "the old fashioned country seat" must give way for the erection of a new high school building.

Built as a large square farm house in 1790 it was bought and remodeled into a mansion 10 years later by Thomas Gold. His son-in-law, the Hon. Nathan Appleton, acquired the house upon Mr. Gold's death. Mr. Appleton's daughter became the wife of the poet Longfellow. Mr. Longfellow lived in the mansion which he used as a summer home through the early fifties.

It is hoped to keep alive the traditions associated with the site. Hence it is probable that the school will be named the "Longfellow School," and moreover, the stairway that played so prominent a part in the poem Longfellow wrote there he preserved within the new building.

The original clock was removed some years ago to the Craigie House, the Longfellow home in Cambridge, Mass. Another characteristic "grandfather clock" now ticks on the landing halfway up the stairs, and such a clock, it is planned, will adorn the preserved staircase.

At the age of 62 Rudyard Kipling lives in seclusion in the small village of Burwash, England, where he avoids visitors and resents interruptions to his quiet life. Though every Englishman knows Kipling's name, few can tell where he lives, and fewer still have ever set eyes on him. Occasionally he comes to London from the depths of Sussex for a season function—a Royal garden party, the annual cricket match between Eton and Harrow, the two great public schools, a polo match at Hurlingham, a small dinner given by his cousin, Premier Baldwin. In town he shuns the fashionable hotel restaurant and stays at a small old-fashioned place in a quiet backwater off Piccadilly.

Winters now (since he nearly died of pneumonia) he seeks the sun in some spot favored by the English public school educated uppermiddle class, to which he belongs and which he reveres.

Lucky?

When she comes to the footlights to acknowledge Broadway's applause of her marvelous dancing in "Sideshow of New York," theatre-goers sit forward admiring her youthful charms; the fresh crispness of her rose-petal skin and her gleaming black hair. She's Virginia Clark, of 143 Twenty-third St., Jackson Heights, New York City.

"When friends say I'm lucky to have such clear skin and soft, shining hair," says Miss Clark, "I have to tell them it isn't luck at all. In my case, it's the result of care. For my hair, I use the simple method that's all the rage among New York girls now. It's so easy. All you do is put a little Danderine on your hair each time you use it. This makes my scalp feel just grand and keeps away all dandruff. It keeps my hair and scalp so clean I don't have to shampoo nearly as often as I did. It makes my hair soft and easy to dress; holds it in place; and gives it more lustre than brilliantine!"

Danderine quickly removes that oily film from your hair; brings out its natural color; makes it fairly sparkle. Dandruff disappears when you use Danderine. Waves, set with it, stay in longer. It isn't oily and doesn't show. All drug stores have the generous 35c bottles. Over five million used a year!

SOME ANCIENT ONES

Fossils Discovered Believed To Be Six Million Years Old

A 6,000,000-year-old fossil of the earth's largest mammal is among the discoveries announced by the American Central Asiatic Expedition, just returned to Peking (Peking) from a three months' exploration in the interior of Mongolia. Roy Chapman Andrews, the leader, says that the monster is probably related to the Baluchitherium found in Baluchistan, and must have been at least 25 feet high and weighed 15 to 20 tons.

Mr. Andrews failed to find traces of the "Tre-dawn man" who he is convinced existed 2,000,000 years ago but he is unexpectedly compensated for this disappointment by the discovery of important traces of maozolithic culture resembling adilian culture found in France (in a cave at Mas Dazil) and in its later stages in Scandinavia. Those people appear to have dwelt among the Mongolian sand dunes about 20,000 years ago and were evidently vastly more numerous than the Mongols today. "Mr. Andrews thinks it probable that as Mongolia became more and more arid they migrated into China across Siberia, possibly as far as Alaska. The Andrews' expedition covered altogether 5,000 miles exploring and mapping much of the unknown territory.

MARKETING FOR ANTARCTIC EXPLORERS WOULD HARROW HOUSEWIFE'S SOUL

Assembling a Two Years' Supply of Food for Sixty Men Is the Colossal Task Performed by the Chief Steward of the Byrd Expedition.

IN millions of households throughout the length and breadth of the land, housewives pore over their long marketing lists. Carefully they check each item, trying to recall what they may have forgotten. Everything seems to have been set down, but an anxious doubt remains.

Pity the poor housewife! Christmas, the Fourth of July and other holidays are bound to fall on Saturday or Monday every once in a while, and each time they do the same mild panic takes possession of her. With the stores closed for two full days, she must lay in ahead of time all the meats and vegetables, the condiments and desserts, required to meet the demands of her healthily hungry family. Woe to her if her supplies fall short!

That the housewife's role is an exacting one, nobody will deny. But consider the situation faced by the person who must do the marketing in advance for the huge supplies of food that will be necessary to feed sixty men over a period of two years. Sixty is about twenty times the size of an ordinary family. Two years is three hundred and sixty-five times as long as two days. In two years, sixty men will eat about 2,200 meals.

Harried Months

What woman would want to change places with Sidney Greason, Chief Steward of the Byrd Antarctic Expedition, who was confronted with just that situation? Who would envy him the harried months he spent before the expedition's first vessel, the Norwegian-built ice breaker the City of New York, cleared from Hoboken, New Jersey, in the latter part of August, bound for Dunedin, New Zealand, the last port of call prior to reaching the great ice-barrier that fringes the desolate continent of Antarctica?

Even if the housewife does forget the roast, the soup or any of a dozen other items her family won't suffer. They'll struggle through until the stores open again, or else kindly neighbors will supply the lack. In Antarctica, however, there are no stores and no neighbors. There, more than in any other region of the globe, men are thrown upon their own resources. Their own foresight holds the scales of comfort or hardship, perhaps of life or death.

Between the nearest inhabited land and the Bay of Whales, where Commander Byrd will establish his base camp, lie 2,300 miles of ocean famed for the fury of the gales that sweep down upon it from the polar plateau. Throughout certain seasons of the year, icepacks and drifting bergs render navigation entirely impossible within vast areas adjacent to the southern continent. No dependence can be placed upon securing from outside sources any supplies to meet deficiencies that might arise.

Against Enormous Odds

Completely shut off from civilization for months at a time, the life of the members of the expedition will be a constant battle against enormous odds. The Commander, on his projected airplane flight to the pole, must take into consideration the menace of winds which with incredible swiftness attain a velocity of over a hundred miles an hour. Ice storms and the hidden crevasses will be a constant threat to the safety of the geologists and meteorologists during their extensive trips of exploration away from the base.

In no other part of the world could good food and plenty of it be of more importance. The intense cold, the entire absence of sunlight throughout four months of the Antarctic winter, the nerve strain, and the hard physical labor required of men living under primitive conditions, all join in demanding that the men's bodies be well fueled if they are to attain their goals without paying too great a toll in the shape of mental and physical ills.

The use of the word fueled is no mere figure of speech. Men are exactly like steam engines in that their energy cannot be created out of thin air. The source of man's energy is food, just as the engine's source of energy is coal. A poor grade of coal lowers the efficiency of the engine. Man is slightly more complicated, for both his energy and morale are impaired almost as greatly by lack of a properly balanced ration as by poor quality.

In the combined stocks of all the provision stores of a good-sized town it would scarcely be possible to find greater quantities or varieties of food than were assembled by Chief Steward Greason to accompany the Byrd Expedition to the Antarctic. The gargantuan proportions assumed by the various items is illustrated by the inclusion of eight tons of sugar, 40,000 gallon cans of vegetables, 10,000 cans of puddings, jams and marmalades, 4,000 pounds of butter, 2,400 dozen eggs, five tons of beef, and two tons of ham and bacon.

The enormous quantity of sugar—enough to provide every man with an allowance of over a third of a pound a day—can also be taken as an illustration of the study given to the question of assuring an ample supply of the foods best calculated to enable men to cope with the conditions under which the South Polar party will live. Sugar is particularly essential in cold climates since it is a highly concentrated source of energy and internal warmth. One pound of sugar contains almost three times as many calories as a pound of beefsteak cut from the top of the round.

Two Extremes of Temperature

Aside from the special climatic conditions and the impossibility of replenishing supplies, the task of feeding an Antarctic expedition setting out from the northern hemisphere is complicated by the fact that both food and containers must be able to withstand the effects of the two wide est extremes of temperature. Before reaching the great white continent, the expedition's vessels must pass through the hottest regions of the tropics. Once at the destination, temperatures nearly two hundred degrees below those prevailing about the equator will be encountered.

Heat is much more likely to affect food adversely than is cold, but so far as the containers are concerned, the exact opposite is true. Extreme cold disintegrates tin to a gray powder. Tin containers, therefore, must be protected by heavy lacquers or outside coverings. The sugar, for instance, by special arrangement with the American Sugar Refining Company, was packed in fifty-pound, airtight boxes, the inside sheathing of tin being covered by wire-bound boards. To prevent the wholesale breakage of glass containers, space had to be left for the expansion of the contents due to freezing.

When Supplies Fall Short

It is as true of a South Polar expedition as of an army, that it fights upon its stomach. Failure of his food supplies turned Sir Ernest Shackleton back from the South Pole when within ninety-seven miles of his goal. In other cases where there was no lack of food so far as total quantity was concerned, the expedition has been handicapped and sometimes wrecked by the absence of certain items essential to health.

Scurvy, that dread scourge of both the frozen north and the frozen south, is directly due to improper diet. The scourge attacked the entire party of the American Arctic Expedition of 1853-55, led by Dr. E. K. Kane. The difficulties of the British Antarctic Expedition of 1874-76 were increased a hundred-fold by an outbreak of the disease. As late as 1912, the disease showed its lurking power by bringing to the point of death Lieutenant E. R. Evans, second in command of the Scott Antarctic Expedition.

Neither scurvy nor any other ill which abundance of the right kinds of food can prevent is likely to afflict the members of the Byrd Expedition. Even the special delicacies associated with feast days such as Thanksgiving and Christmas have been provided. When on Christmas day old English plum puddings are placed upon the groaning board, the shades of long dead explorers may be expected to gather and gaze in envious silence upon the cheerful scene, remembering how they suffered and some times died like flies for want of the proper foods.

Secrets of Antarctica

Many men have died in Antarctica, for the weapons with which the ice-its secrets are among the most deadly that man can face. That explorers continue more than eager to defy these weapons is due to the fact that the unveiling of the secrets of Antarctica is rich in the promise of results which will contribute to the progress of science and to the benefit of the race.

It remains for geologists to determine the extent and value of the great coal fields that lie at the base of the polar plateau. The discovery of fossil remains may answer the question whether before the glacial age the continent was inhabited by prehistoric human or animal life. The existence of the coal deposits is proof that large sections were once covered with abundant vegetation.

The Indian monsoon and the storms which are the terror of navigators in southern seas have their origin near the South Pole. The melting of the ice cap during the summer months bears a relation to sea level over the entire globe and to floods as far off as the Nile. The huge expanse of ice and snow affects weather conditions throughout the world. Meteorologists have a vast and fruitful field of investigation awaiting them.

The degree to which the Byrd Expedition will succeed in solving the mysteries of a largely unexplored continent equal in area to the United States and Mexico combined, will depend to a great extent upon the foresight and general efficiency of Sidney Greason, the man who in August, 1928, had to be sure that hisarder was stocked with all the ingredients of an appetizing meal to be eaten in December, 1929; or perhaps in June, six months later.

IN KING TUT'S DAY

They Bought Chicks From Hatcheries, According To the Records.

Farmers and poultrymen who hold the belief that when they buy chicks from a modern hatchery they are patronizing an infant industry are due for a surprise. King Tut, so ancient records show, must have dined regularly on broilers raised from hatchery chicks, for incubators have been used for production of chicks by the Egyptians and Chinese from time immemorial.

The hatchery business, far from being a product of modern enterprise, was old when Columbus first landed in America. It has behind it the tradition of ages, and is probably the first farm industry to adopt economical mass production methods—long before modern industrial leaders "discovered" this means of reducing production costs.

The hatching and selling of baby chicks as a business enterprise has existed more than 2,000 years in Egypt and China, ancient records show, while fifty years ago, when hatcheries were unknown in this country, there were at least 150 hatcheries in Egypt, each with a capacity of about 200,000 eggs a year. Thirty-four years ago, the first shipment of chicks was made in this country, inaugurating what was to grow to one of agriculture's largest industries.

Although the hatcheries of the country have several organizations, and do millions of dollars worth of business each year, it was not until recently that some of the more progressive hatcherymen banded together to promote the sale of chicks on a purely business basis, with quality of product, and excellence of service to customers as their basic ideal. These hatcheries, operating under the slogan, "Hatchery Chicks for Greater Profits," are scattered from coast to coast. They come nearest to the ideal of the ancient Egyptian hatcheries, whose operators for generations handed their business down from father to son, to carry out the traditions of service which is a part of their industry.

MINORITY PRESIDENTS

A minority president is one who is elected without receiving a majority of the total number of votes cast. This is made possible by the fact that the electors vote by states. There is no trustworthy record of the popular vote for president previous to 1824. In the early days of the government under the Constitution the state legislatures elected or "appointed" the presidential electors. The people's choice was expressed indirectly by their vote for members of the state legislatures. In 1824 none of the four candidates for president had a majority of either the electoral or popular votes. John Quincy Adams was chosen president by the House of Representatives. Since then James K. Polk, Zachary Taylor, James Buchanan, Abraham Lincoln, Rutherford B. Hayes, James A. Garfield, Grover Cleveland, Benjamin Harrison and Woodrow Wilson have been elected president although they received a minority of the total popular vote. Lincoln was a minority president only the first term, but Wilson failed to receive a majority of the popular vote either time he ran.—The Pathfinder.

Touches that Add Style to Dresses By MAE MARTIN

You get so you just despise a dress when everywhere you go it seems to shout, "I am a last year's relic." A few touches have brought many dresses like that back into style. It's amazing to see how easily they can be transformed by a few buttons, a little braid and the quick magic of home tinting or dyeing.

You don't need any experience to do home tinting or dyeing successfully if you are sure to use only true fast, less Diamond Dyes. Each package represents the perfection of over 50 years of dye-making. Tinting with them is easy as bluing, and dyeing just takes a little more time. New colors appear like magic, right over the old colors.

Diamond Dyes give the faintest of the latest tints and the richest of the new shades, with never a trace of that undesirable red dye which comes from inferior dyes. Insist on Diamond Dyes and save disappointment.

My new 64 page book, "Color Craft," gives hundreds of dollar-saving suggestions for renewing clothes, draperies and rugs. It's fully illustrated in colors. Write for your FREE copy, NOW. Address: Mae Martin, Home Service Dept., Diamond Dyes, Burlington, Vermont.

A THOUSAND WOMEN

Is the Ambitious Goal of Mrs. Rich For the Educational Club.

Editor of The Courier-Gazette:—

While our Women's Educational Club during its eight years of Citizenship study, with Civics textbook, state speakers, current events, political and religious discussions and a general good time for all, with special stress on development of powers for independent thinking along individual obligations to bear practical voting burdens new to women, has grown to be Maine's largest federated club, with 654 members, yet it would be proud to extend still further its usefulness and desires 1,000 members, including more from outlying towns.

There is no limit of age either; members are enrolled from the cradle to the grave. Neither is there any other restriction. Socialists, Democrats or Republicans likewise those with no partisan bias being equally welcome. Free religious discussions are held without bloodshed. Jews, Catholics, all Protestant sects, free-thinkers and atheists being already listed. The dues are only 25 cents a year, and many prove their faith in the earnest purpose of this organization by sending $1 and $2 to be credited to advance enrollment, four having paid through to the year 1936.

Nor is there any geographical limit as this club has on its rolls members in Pasadena, Calif., Flint, Mich., Minneapolis, Minn., Boston, Chicago, Miami, Winter Park, and Jacksonville, Florida; Asbury Park, N. J., New York and all over Maine. Now it seeks to extend its suburban membership, as its year-around afternoon picnics may be conveniently attended by motor parties from any section in Knox County advance notice of time and place of such being always given to this paper. Please send your and your minor daughters' names and quarters now to Mary Perry Rich, president, Rockland, R.F.D., or to Alice Hovey, treasurer, 49 Park street, and become enrolled at once.

Our democracy can never fail if we ourselves take proper steps toward increasing interest in and understanding of political education and early establish civic instruction. Men are requested to forward their wives' and daughters' dues. Thank you.

MYSTERY OF MR. COOLIDGE

[New York Herald Tribune]

More than one correspondent noted as a surprising fact the crowds which greeted Mr. Coolidge on his recent trip to Vermont. They were unexpectedly large and friendly—perhaps affectionate was the right word. At every turn there was evidence that Mr. Coolidge, so far from having passed the peak of his popularity, was never so warmly regarded by his fellow countrymen.

The five years of Mr. Coolidge's presidency have constituted, in truth, an amazing era of good feeling. It would be difficult to parallel the widespread esteem and absence of enmity in which Mr. Coolidge has lived. Now, as his term begins to approach its end and by all the rules of politics he should be nearing eclipse and obscurity—who has less power than a departing President?—this good will and admiration follow him. What is true of Vermont is true of New York and the country over. It is, indeed, amazing.

The historians will be long debating the source of Mr. Coolidge's power. By violating all the rules of modern American politics—which call for loud words and many actions—this silent Vermont Yankee has earned a larger and stancher following than any other President of our times. Plainly some fundamental traits of human greatness are fighting on his side. Sincerity is obviously one and simplicity another. A fine analytical mind, that dispels the sloppy thinkers, but cuts through to the truth, helps. But the assemblage of traits that make Calvin Coolidge what he is can hardly be reduced to a formula. He is simply another salty, strong countryman, who grew in stature over the years, steadily and silently, until he measured up to the greatest executive office in the world. The will, the conscience, the character that lie behind such a growth and mastery, can neither be seen nor measured. They are the only real mystery of the President, and they are shared by every human being. Perhaps that is why so many humans like him.

A PROMISING CANDIDATE

Even his enemies, and those who fail to agree with his policies, will admit that Alfred E. Smith is a promising candidate. He is prepared to promise anything. He has now promised the farmers everything contained in the McNary-Hawson bill. It is true that he did not believe in the absurdly unconstitutional equalization fee at an earlier point in the campaign. He has swallowed that, evidently realizing that there are people in the West who would swallow anything. His pose of consistency and a gallant sincerity has evidently been abandoned in favor of practical politics.—Wall Street Journal.

One can cultivate cynicism, skepticism or unbelief far easier than one can gain understanding, appreciation or conviction.—Ernest M. Hopkins.

In 5 MILLION HOMES TONIGHT

A cry in the night holds no terror for the household where there's Castoria! A few drops, and Baby's sudden ailment is relieved. Your little one is comforted, and you have done only what any nurse or any doctor would have told you to do. For Castoria is a vegetable product; made for babies, and the one safe means of quieting any infant. It is not a narcotic, it contains no opiate, yet it always comforts a child.

Don't let night come without a bottle of Castoria on hand; it's a mighty comfortable feeling to know it's in the house. And it is an ever-ready aid when any of the children are constipated, have colic, develop a case of diarrhea. Old and tried, but the standby of modern mothers. Twenty-five million bottles were bought last year.

What Doctors Think of the Laxative Habit

In all history, no Indian was ever known to have constipation. Nor need YOU. He chewed the bark of a tree called cascara. Today, we have the candy Cascarets.

Cascaring the bowels never forms a laxative habit. If already formed, an occasional Cascaret will usually break the habit. For cascara strengthens the muscular walls of the bowels, and their need of any aid at all grows constantly less. What other cathartic has this characteristic? The writer knows of none.

An evacuation brought gently about by cascara will, nine times in ten, be followed by full functioning of the bowels on the morrow—and for days after. For there is no REACTION as with sickening salts, or any of the man-made purgatives that go through one's system like a bullet.

Physicians tell us cascara is the ideal laxative—and the tongue tells us candy Cascarets are its ideal form. At least a million people know this; what a pity there are any who don't! Especially parents; because children love to take a Cascaret. After which, for days on end, the bowels will be seen to work of their own accord.

The only habit from cascara is that of regularity! Cascarets tone and train the bowels. But at the first sign of returning sluggishness another Cascaret is as effective as the first.

There isn't a druggist who hasn't Cascarets, so WHY experiment with laxatives?

WHERE LIQUOR FLOWS

Americans Who Regret Saloon's Passing Should Go To Russia Says French Newspaper.

"It seems that in the United States there is a strong movement against the prohibition law," says "Le Petit Journal," of Paris, which does not mean to be ironic. "The Democratic party demands in its program (sic) that the laws be so modified that an American citizen can, for instance, have a quiet beer without risking fine or imprisonment."

Americans who regret the good old saloon days should go to Russia to be convinced that all is not well when alcohol flows freely, suggests the French newspaper. "There the government, instead of seeking to restrict the sale of alcohol, actually seeks to increase it, since it provides revenue. The Russian people in 1925 drank about 12,000,000 gallons of alcohol; in 1927, more than 80,000,000 gallons; and the Soviet newspaper "Izvestia" states that in 1928 they will drink close to 130,000,000 gallons!"

"This overwhelming increase does not, however, prevent the Soviets from calling themselves as 'temperate' as the Republicans in the United States, but in Russia 'fraternity' means massacre, 'pacifism' means heavy armaments and 'temperance' means vodka till your eyes pop out,"—Living Age.

SOME VOTING STATISTICS

At present there are, in round numbers, about 20,000,000 males and 20,000,000 females of voting age in the United States. This makes a possible voting population of about 40,000,000. But only about 25,000,000 actually voted at the last presidential election. Thus out of our total population about 26 per cent actually vote. If the Catholics vote in the same ratio as the rest of our citizens, about 5,000,000 out of the total Catholic population of 18,604,850.—The Pathfinder.

HELPED DURING MIDDLE AGE

Woman Took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Denver, Colo.—"I have taken six bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and will take more. I am taking it as a tonic to help me through the Change of Life and I am telling many of my friends to take it as I found nothing before this to help me. I had so many bad feelings at night that I could not sleep and for two years I could not go down town because I was afraid of falling. My mother took the Vegetable Compound years ago with good results and now I am taking it during the Change of Life and recommend it."—Mrs. T. A. Miller, 1611 Adams Street, Denver, Colorado.

SMITH IN THE WEST

His Speeches Convince the Nation That Hoover Is the Man Needed.

Governor Smith's tour of the West, his first venture into politics of more than local importance, has been a distinct gain for the Republican ticket.

Even from Democratic sources come admissions that the Governor hurt his cause during his visit to the farm states. He simply didn't "take." The spell of grandeur which was cast about him while he remained in New York disappeared as the tour progressed. The most luxurious campaign special ever put on wheels failed to hide the fact that the Governor does not understand the West and the West does not understand him. The Democratic nominee demonstrated that he is not nationally-minded, that he has no grasp of the problems which concern the United States as a whole.

On the outstanding problem of the day—farm relief—he is still floundering. The West was intensely interested in knowing what he would have to say about it, especially since he had admitted two years ago that "I really can't think of any way of helping the farmers." He hasn't improved his position a great deal since then. In his speech at Omaha he made a few covert gestures at embracing the principle of the McNary-Haugen bill, but he ended with an unilluminating statement that after his election he would "call a conference." As Senator Borah remarked, if the farmer has to wait for that event to happen it will be a tremendously long time before the farm problem is solved.

In contrast to this vague and obscure position, Mr. Hoover has proclaimed a definite and concrete program for agriculture. It has won the approval of those who are most interested in the problem and who are most competent to judge. It has brought Mr. Hoover messages of congratulation from the men who have led the farm fight for years past. Moreover, the record of the Republican Administration in behalf of the farmer is something that cannot be lightly put aside.

The farmers, like a great many other people in all parts of the nation, are fully convinced that the Governor is wholly unsound on the vital tariff issue. His reference in his acceptance speech to the Underwood tariff as his ideal is something that a lot of Democrats would like to forget, and would like to have the farmers forget.

The Underwood tariff included most of the products of our agriculture on the free list, and the farmers and workers too were all but ruined by its operation. Had it not been for the war that ruin would have been complete and final. The progress which agriculture has made since the war has been due in a large measure to the protection which has been granted to farm products by the Fordney-McCumber tariff, a Republican measure.

The Underwood tariff was no less disastrous in its effect on the workers. Twice during the duration of the Democratic schedules there was a reduction of $100,000,000 a week in the country's payroll. The damage did not stop there. The loss of this vast sum contributed still further to the demoralization of the farmers' domestic market and restricted to a marked degree the activity of our manufacturers.

The personalities of the candidates is important, but the party principles which affect the well-being of the nation are more important by far. If the United States wants to continue to be well-fed, well housed and well clothed, it must vote for the men who believe in the principles which make that prosperity possible. In other words, it must elect Herbert Hoover and Senator Curtis.

THE KELLOGG TREATY

No American citizen should value lightly the so-called Kellogg treaty outlawing war, as universally accepted. Europe is likely to discover that this treaty in moral effect relegates to oblivion the old Hague treaty defining the rights and duties of "neutrals." The United States henceforth will regard war as an intolerable nuisance, and will find ways to visit crushing displeasure upon any nation starting a war of aggression for selfish reasons. Indirectly, we have strengthened the Locarno agreements. Mr. Kellogg and President Coolidge are entitled to the congratulations of every intelligent person, in whatever country.—Review of Reviews.

RAMBLES AFIELD

Here, There and Yonder,
Touching the Alluring
Things of Nature.

[Twentieth Ramble]

After I moved to Portland I explored Deering Oaks rather thoroughly while it was almost in a state of nature. White oaks grew there in abundance and big gray squirrels were almost as tame as those on Boston Common. Many a time have I sat at the foot of a big oak tree with a pair of gray squirrels frisking about the trunk, coming down almost to my head, peering into my face as though to ask, "Who are you and what are you doing here?" One year the sweet acorns were so plentiful that kneeling in one spot, turning round and round and reaching as far as possible, I picked up three hundred and sixty-five acorns, though I confess I did some strong reaching in order to get the last half dozen or so in order to have as many acorns as there are days in the year. Another day I gathered under various trees more than a peck, and thought I had a real prize—enough to last all through the winter, but alas, I found that in a short time they turn dark and lose their taste besides being so hard that only a rock crusher would be likely to succeed in grinding them sufficiently fine to swallow.

On one of these excursions I found a little hollow about the size of an ordinary kitchen, filled with the most beautiful plants I had ever seen. The leaves were spotted brown and green so intermingled that the general effect was like some gorgeous tapestry, and I exclaimed, "Adder's Tongue!" As I had never seen this plant I could not be sure, but I had read about it, and on a closer examination I found several blossoms which I took home and showed to some one who understood plants and I learned that I was correct in my surmise; it really was adder's tongue. At the same time I learned that the common name for it is dog tooth violet, but why I cannot imagine, for there is no part of the plant which bears the least resemblance to any kind of violet.

Still later I learned from a botany that this is really one of the lily family and has a bulb like any lily though of course rather small. They grow somewhere in the vicinity of Glen Cove quite profusely, as my pupils often brought the flowers to school. There must be other places not far away where they can be found, for all the children of my acquaintance seem to be familiar with them and it seems strange to me that in all my wanderings I never saw any till I was twenty-six years old and then had to go to Portland to find them.

Away at the farther corner of those oaks, where Portland street meets another street, I found a knoll of flowers which are not at all common in this region; in fact I have seen them here in but two places—one on the road on which I used to drive the cow to pasture, up over the high ledge on "the new road" so called because formerly the regular road was laid out along the side of the mountain by the Benner houses then down back of the Henry Witham house, later known as "St. Larrabee's." By the side of this old road and near the farther end was a deep square hole under some bushes, where we were told a child had once been buried.

and afterward removed to the cemetery, and we children used to pause at that place with sober faces and speak with hushed voices, as if the little form were still lying there. The other place where I found the flowers mentioned above was on the road which goes west from Rockville along the side of the hill, by the Vinal farm, and joining the main road at a point just this side of West Rockport. They were not plentiful even then, and I presume they have "run out" in both places by now, for I have searched diligently for them on the old familiar road leading toward the Bog, but have failed to find any.

I seldom find any one who knows the blossom or even knows of its existence as it is a modest little thing, growing from three to six inches high with small, bright colored flowers something like a tiny rose-colored pea blossom, one of its parts being delicately fringed, which peculiarity lends additional beauty to the blossom. The leaves are brownish like the checkerberry leaf and I tried to chew the first ones I found, but I soon found my mistake, as they were unpalatable and not hard like a checkerberry leaf. Then I began to make closer scrutiny of the plant and soon found the dear little blossom. How delighted I was, for it was something new and I was but a child, ten or possibly twelve years old. It seemed to me that Columbus when discovering a new world felt much as I did when discovering a new flower. Those who have seen the polygala at its best can perhaps enter into my feelings and understand something of my happiness at such a discovery. It seems strange to me that the plant is so rarely seen, for in each case when I have found them the plants were very thrifty and vigorous and I expected them to reproduce themselves and spread rapidly but instead they have nearly disappeared, much to my regret.

A friend, seeing my monthbretia in bloom a short time ago, asked me their name and when I told her she paused a moment, then said hesitatingly, "Y-e-s, but what is the human name for them?" I had to confess that monthbretia is all the name I ever heard for them and it is so in regard to the polygala, for I have never heard any "human" name for it. It was her whimsical way of asking for a civilized, common English name.

Most of the flower names which my friends regard as without sense and too hard to remember, really mean a good deal more than such names as "patient" Lucy, grass pink, dog tooth violet, and such local names for most of the specific names applied to plants have a Latin root and describe the flower or foliage. For instance, "Alba" means white, "Rubra" means red, "Flora pleno" means double, or many petaled, etc. Look at the word "Eupatorium perfoliatum," then go and look at a stalk of common thoroughwort and you will find that the foliage or leaf is apparently perforated by the stem. If you can't find this plant, cut a strip of paper, tapering it to a point at each end, then run a knitting needle through the middle, and you will have a fair idea of a thoroughwort leaf, and will begin to understand what "perfoliatum" means.

BULL MOOSE CHARGES

Belfast Motorists Have a Thrilling Experience On the Merrill Road.

A Belfast dispatch says: "Clair Ward, manager of the local plant of the Hood Creamery Co., and Ralph J. Thompson, his assistant, recently had a thrilling experience with a huge bull moose while driving in the former's car on the Belfast-Merrill road, not far from the Merrill Village. They saw the moose loom up on the side of the road about five feet from the car and before they had time to think he dashed at the car lights, but missed them and landed on the running board. "The two men realized that he had hit the car with force, but the next instant he fell from the running board and disappeared much to their relief. They saw him plainly through the car windows. The back guard was dented and the car was otherwise scared. A bunch of the animal's fur was left in the handle of the door and was also scattered over the running board. People living in the vicinity say the deer frequently are seen there as it is a strip of the river connecting two large wooded sections of the town."

THE BETTING STRAWS

Show Hoover a Favorite At
3 1/2 to 1—Even Money He Gets 300 Electoral Votes.

Even money was quoted in Wall Street Monday that Herbert Hoover would receive 300 or more votes in the Electoral College, or 34 more than the number necessary to a choice.

Hoover who was 2 to 1 favorite when nominated, has increased his chances since then, in the view of betting men. He was the ruling choice at 3 1/2 to 1 and 4 to 1. Specialists in election betting in the financial district reported that large sums of money were held in readiness to bet on Smith, if his speeches during the month turn the tide in his favor in the big cities. Some of those who are anxious to bet on Mr. Smith but afraid to in the present circumstances, believe that some sensational anti-Volstead speeches would make the Governor a good bet to win this fall.

In spite of the big odds on Mr. Hoover at present, the election gamblers feel, according to betting commissioners, that a very large percentage of the electorate is still undecided how to vote though leaning toward Hoover. There has been a betting slump in the last week, partly because gamblers had a greater immediate interest in the world series and partly because bettors feel that the campaign is so far in its preliminary sparring stage and that the heavy fighting is to be done in the next four weeks. Men who want to risk money on the election, for instance, are reported to be watching eagerly the effect of Hoover's speechmaking in the South, and it is considered possible that he may take a state or two from Governor Smith and smash the Solid South.

The betting is now even money which man carries North Carolina. It is 2 to 1 that Governor Smith carries Florida, 2 to 1 that he carries Texas and 2 to 1 that he carries Alabama. Twelve years ago it was 100 to 1 that the Democrat would carry any of these four states. Even if Hoover does not carry a single one of the 10 states of the "Solid South," it is believed that the effect of the campaign will be a lasting one, as it has resulted in the building up of a Southern Republican organization.

On the other side of the shield, Mr. Hoover is only a 4 to 1 favorite in Pennsylvania, where the Republican normally should be a 20 to 1 choice, and bets are offered that Smith will have the largest popular vote ever cast in that state for a Democratic candidate for the Presidency. Mr. Hoover is a 2 to 1 favorite to win Illinois, but Smith supporters say that the Governor would have had at least an even chance to carry that state, except for the death of George E. Brennan.

Hoover Favorite in Jersey

From the betting standpoint, the most impressive single fact of the campaign is the case of New Jersey. The betting was even on which candidate would carry that state until Hoover made his speech in Newark. Almost immediately thereafter Hoover became a 2 to 1 favorite, which he still is. This is supposed to be a proof of a bewildered and uncrystallized public sentiment which may be subject to sudden and violent changes during the coming four weeks when the big battling is done, according to J. S. Fried of 20 Broad street.

Although the candidate's addresses have been broadcast over great networks, the effect of their speeches has been greatest in the localities where they were made. Hoover's New Jersey speech, for instance, seems to have made a vast impression on that state. The day has not yet come, according to those who study campaigns to bet on them, when a candidate can get results by staying in one place and talking to the country by radio. The personal visit of the candidate focuses the attention of people for a radius of 100 or 200 miles, but does not command an equal degree of interest in other parts of the country.

"When I don't want a man's attentions and he asks me where I live, I say in the suburbs."

"Ha, ha! Excellent; but where do you really live, Miss Brown?"

"In the suburbs, Mr. Short."—Atlanta Journal.
